

New to Savannah? Your Pet Needs a Vet, Too.

Moving is a lot to manage. Your pet's veterinary care is one thing you can check off the list early. Check out our quick guide for getting your pet's veterinary care settled after a move.

1. Transfer your pet's medical records

- Ask your previous veterinary hospital to send your pet's records, including vaccine history, lab work, imaging, and medication history.
- If your pet takes regular medication, make sure you have enough to get through the transition.

2. Know what your pet needs

- Review vaccines and parasite prevention.
- Make sure your pet's microchip information is current.
- Bring a list of medications, supplements, and food.
- Ask about any ongoing conditions or changes you've noticed.

3. What to bring to the first visit

- Previous veterinary records, if available.
- Medication and supplement information.
- Questions or concerns you want to discuss.
- Your pet's current food and prevention products, if helpful.

4. Ask questions

A good first visit should give you a chance to understand your pet's health, ask questions, and talk through recommendations.

5. Keep your pet's care on track

Once you've found a veterinary team you trust, keep routine wellness visits, preventive care, and dental care on the calendar.

New to Port City?

If you are looking for a veterinarian in the Savannah area, we'd love the opportunity to meet you. Contact Port City Animal Hospital at (912) 525-0255 to learn more or schedule an appointment.

492 Jimmy Deloach Pkwy, Suite 106 • Savannah, GA 31407 • (912) 525-0255

New to Port City? We're here to help you get your pet's care off to a great start.